	Architectural Statement: This large, frame with clapboard siding dwelling has been modified several times but still retains the architectural character of the turn of the century. Originally linked to outbuildings (including a woodshed and a stable the latter of which is still standing), subsequent modifications included the addition of a simply detailed wrap around porch with balustrade (1911) (A). This is a handsome example of a well maintained late 19th century dwelling and-although not on the main business street-is still a unique structure within the District. It is an excellent, intact (OVER)

The property has a history of divided ownership until 1889, when N.S.Washburn acquired a unified title. But prior owners had constructed improvements on the property and the tax rolls suggest more than one building. By 1910 Ruth Washburn is in possession of the building. This building might well have started its individual careers as either a hotel or boarding house, serving the transient male lumber men during the City's early days (B) N.S.Washburn was the foreman of the (OVER)	Map Name Sturgeon Bay - District
